The faithful little woman who has accompanied him through every mile of his long flight also refused to divulge the places visited by them and in answer' to questions said: "We've been dodging the police and having a good time at it."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Cleary bear the marks of the long trail which they have followed in evading the officers who were searching for them. McCullagh declares that Cleary little resembles the robust Democratic boss of Haverstraw of two years ago.

WORLD'S TREASURE

Man Who Sacrificed Daughter's For Twenty-Five Centuries She Has Gathered Gold and Silver From All Nations.

> The average person in thinking of india has contrasting visions of princes living in a state of Arabian Nights magnificence, laden with jewels, and also of a land of famines, crowded with poor people living in the greatest sim-plicity, not to say poverty and distress. It is a country of Arabian Night wonder tales of treasures of gold and silver, and the tales are all true, as well as those of famines, for India is the great absorber of the precious metal of the world, and it is hoarded by rich and poor alike.

From the latest commerce reports comes a vast amount of interesting information concerning this absorption of treasure by this great country. India is what two different writers have called respectively "the great sink of precious metals" and the "money graveyard of the world." For twenty-five centuries there has been a constant flow of gold and silver into India from the Western nations. It has been one of the unchanging economic conditions of the world, and one which rulers of different lands, depleted for it, have tried in vain as a mounted to fabulous sums, having the most autonishing possibilities.

Estimates and statistics which show in detail how this vast amount of treasure has reached India are interesting. By the authentic records kept by the British government since 1825 it is shown that $1,500,000,000 more of gold has gone into India than has come out. In less than a century $2,000,000,000 of the two preclous metais has been absorbed, and these figures show only a continuation of a movement going on stable's Posse.

OLSTER BAY, J. L. Nov. 4.—A woman "spook" who dresses all in black, smokes cigars and shoots a revolver has Oyster Bay, L. L., in the grip of a bad scare. She appears only after nightfall and is credited with chasing children to their homes, following unescorted women and men, and with disappearing, seemingly into thin air, when pursued by a posse of 100 men and the village police force, Constable John Thompson.

The woman of mystery has been busy, several evenings and women and children are afraid to venture out of their homes. Children playing in the woods that skirt Northwood, the country home of Mortimer L. Schiff, were first chassed by the "spook." Their stories were laughed at until Tearl Corey, of Baylis Hill, an absternious carpenter, ran in terror when he saw the woman, attired in deep black and with a cigar sticking out of her mouth at a rakish angle, walking toward him.

As he ran he says he heard a hoarse laugh and the sound of a revolver shot and a builet whistled near his head. His sister-in-law, Mrs. Victor L. Corey, whose husband is also a carpenter, saw the woman, and she says many others have been terrorized.

A posse was formed. Armed with cluba and sticks it patrolled the roads in the neighborhood of Berry Hill, which is the favorite haunt of the "spook." Half the posse, it is said, remembered pressing engagements elsewhere when three revolver shots resounded from the depths of the woods, each accompanied by a hair raising laugh.

One theory is that the "spook" is an escaped male lunatic. Others believe it is simply a practical joker.

If the citizens of the village fail to stable's Posse.

Speculators Hold Logged-Off Private Lands at Prohibitive Prices.

In the last decade the Forest Service

In the last decade the Forest Service has classified as agricultural and opened to the public entry more than 15,500 individual scattered tracts of land in the national forests, comprising more than 1,700,000 acres, says an article by the chief forester published in the Year Book of the Department of Agriculture, just issued.

In the last two years, in addition, several large blocks have been eliminated, aggregating more than 2,500,000 acres, and almost 2,000,000 acres more are now under consideration for eliminations.

All the remaining agricultural land in the national forests is confined chiefly in isolated tracts scattered here and their; to restricted areas requiring irrigation, where water cannot be 4biained, and to certain river bottoms and benches which are not covered with heavy and valuable timber.

A constant pressure is being brought to bear on the Government by private individuals who want to acquire possession of these heavily timbered agricultural lands, single quarter sections of which often have a value as high as $30,000 for the timber alone.

In spite of the fact that some of these lands have soil suitable for astriculture, to throw them open as homesteads would not result in farm development. This has been proved over and over again when lands of this kind, acquired under the homestead law, are today held not by homesteaders, but by lumber companies, who promptly purchased them from the Severnment—a speculative process which effectively prevents men of small means from acquiring land and establishing homes.

Timbered Land Withheld.

Timbered Land Withheld.

Timbered Land Withheld.

The Government is withholding from agricultural entry all such heavily timbered land until after the timber is cut off. As soon as this is done the land will be opened to entry, and settlers will be able to acquire it directly from the Government without cost, instead of having to pay from $40 to $60 an acre to land speculators.

For example, on the Keniksu National Forest in Idaho and Washington, the Government's timber sales have tional Forest in Idabo and Washington, the Government's timber sales have been made to include much of the remaining timbered agricultural land. Within eight years, fully 10,000 acres will be made available for settlement. Permanent homes will be established by the settlers, and there will be available for the use of communities approximately $25,000 for roads and schools, their legal share of the proceeds from the timber sales.

Private ownership of heavily timbered agricultural land blocks farming development, says the article; Government ownership insures such development under conditions that give opportunities to the small settler, whose only capital is his strength and courageous perseverance.

JACKSON, Mich., Nov. 4.—A longing to hear and to play the music of Bach on the clavichord, the instrument on which Bach piayed and composed his music, has led Frank M. Watson, twenty-two years old, a Jackson musician, to build one of these instruments, and to build it under such a handleap as would cause the average person to despair.

Two years ago Watson went to Boston and studied for a year at the New England Conservatory of Music. There he acquired a technical knowledge of the plano and kindred instruments, which enabled him to build a reproduction of the clavichord, an instrument which has not been used for 200 years. The result of his work stands in a corner of the home of Mrs. Bennett, a tribute to the genius of the young Jackson musician, and to Bach, the master musician, who was in his prime in the first half of the eightent century.

Among musicians the clavichord is an instrument which is well known for the part it has played in the development of planoforte, and it would seem an easy matter to obtain plenty of material concerning its construction.

Apparently, however, this is not the case, for in his search for such master in his search for such
